Scientists are increasingly recognizing the reality and the importance of the UFO phenomenon. For example, there is a group of psychologists and psychiatrists formed primarily to study the UFO abduction phenomenon, known as "TREAT" (Treatment and Research on Experienced Anomalous Trauma). Now we have what seems to me to be an important breakthrough — a Harvard psychiatrist, Dr. John E. Mack, has recognized the seriousness of the so-called UFO abduction phenomenon. I have therefore chosen to reproduce below the foreword he wrote for David Jacobs' book, "Secret Life". I hope it will inspire some of you to buy or at least to read the book.

A second breakthrough may well be the case in New York City that Budd Hopkins described at the 1992 MUFON Symposium, in which the abduction of a woman by aliens was witnessed by several other people, one apparently, a high diplomatic official. A brief account of that case is also given below. If there is a group inside our government that is trying to keep a lid on the UFO issue (and there are indications that there is), they should be and must be getting worried.

Foreword to "Secret Life — Firsthand Accounts of Abductions"

by David M. Jacobs

Published by Simon & Schuster, Copyright 1992

The idea that men, women, and children can be taken against their wills from their homes, cars, and schoolyards by strange humanoid beings, lifted onto spacecraft, and subjected to intrusive and threatening procedures is so terrifying, and yet so shattering to our notions of what is possible in our universe, that the actuality of the phenomenon has been largely rejected out of hand or bizarrely distorted in most media accounts. This is altogether understandable, given the disturbing nature of UFO abductions and our prevailing notions of reality. The fact remains, however, that for thirty years, and possibly longer, thousands of individuals who appear to be sincere and of sound mind and who are seeking no personal benefit from their stories have been providing to those who will listen consistent reports of precisely such events. Population surveys suggest that hundreds of thousands and possibly more than a million persons in the United States alone may be abductees or "experiencers," as they are sometime called. The abduction phenomenon is, therefore, of great clinical importance if for no other reason that the fact that abductees are often deeply traumatized by their experiences. At the same time the subject is of obvious scientific interest, however much it may challenge our notions of reality and truth.

The relevant professional communities in mental health, medicine, biology, physics, electronics, and other disciplines are understandably skeptical of a phenomenon as strange as UFO abduction, which defies our accepted notions of reality. The effort to enable these communities to take abduction reports seriously will be best served through scrupulously conducted research by investigators who bring a scholarly and dispassionate yet appropriately caring attitude to their work. In this way patterns and meanings may be discovered that can lead to fuller and deeper knowledge and, eventually, to the development of convincing theoretical understanding.

In this book Temple University historian David Jacobs has provided us with work of just this kind. In a field that lends itself to sensationalistic treatment, we have already come to expect of Jacobs a special standard of rigorous scholarship and careful observation. His 1975 book, The UFO Controversy in America, remains a classic history of the early years of UFO-related events. In the present work Dr. Jacobs presents his findings from the investigation of more than sixty abductees over a four-year period, using interviews and hypnosis to overcome their amnesia. His study uncovered more than 300 abduction experiences.

Dr. Jacob's findings will, I believe, impress those who are open at least to the possibility that something important is happening in the lives of these individuals and countless others that cannot readily be explained by the theories and categories currently available to modern science. In Jacob's cases, as in the work of other investigators, hypnosis has proven to be an essential tool in overcoming the amnesia of his subjects. Lest this lead skeptical readers to question the validity of Jacobs' findings, it must be pointed out that we have no evidence from this or any other study that under hypnosis abductees have invented or distorted significantly their memories of the abduction experience. On the contrary, memories brought forth in hypnotic regressions have been repeatedly shown to be consistent with what these and other abductees are able to recall consciously. Hypnosis appears to complete or add greatly to the process of remembering and has proved in this field to be a valuable therapeutic and investigative tool.

Dr. Jacob's work covers a broad range of phenomena associated with UFO encounters. His focus, however, is upon the structure of the abduction experience itself. In cases after case he demonstrates a pattern that is consistent — even in minute details and specific elements that are not available in the mass media — among individuals who have had no opportunity to communicate their experiences to one another. This pattern consists of what Jacobs calls "primary" experiences (physical examination, staring, and urological and gynecological procedures); "secondary experiences (machine examination, visualization, and child presentation); and "ancillary" experiences consisting of various other physical phenomena, mental displays, and sexually related activities. At the heart of the abduction process there appears to be some sort of complex reproductive enterprise involving the conception, gestation, or incubation of human or alien-human hybrid babies. In Jacobs' words, "the focus of the abduction is the production of children."

Another investigator might place greater emphasis upon phenomena that Dr. Jacobs regards as less central, such as the visualizations of planetary destruction and their impact upon the consciousness of abductees. But whatever the emphasis or interpretation of these data, Jacobs' work has given us a solid foundation of carefully documented experience upon which investigators can now build as we add to our knowledge and explore further the meaning of the puzzling and disturbing matter.

Through his meticulous documentation of the structure and content of the UFO abduction phenomenon, Dr. Jacobs has deepened the mystery that lies before us while at the same time bringing us closer to some form of understanding. He has made clear that we are dealing with a phenomenon that has a hard edge, a huge, strange interspecies or interbeing breeding program that has invaded our physical reality and is affecting the lives of hundreds of thousands, if not millions, of people and perhaps in some way the consciousness of the entire planet. Jacobs has given us no explanation, but he has set forth explicitly the phenomena for which any theory must account.

Among ufologists and abduction researchers, explanations have generally fallen into psychosocial (or cultural) and extraterrestrial categories. Psychosocial hypotheses, at least in the Western materialist sense, are difficult to take seriously. For unless we are willing to extend our notions of the powers of the psyche to include the creation of cuts, scars, hemorrhages, and bruises, the simultaneous production of highly elaborate and traumatic experiences similar to one another in minute detail among individuals who have not communicated with one another, and all of the physical phenomena associated with the UFOs themselves, such explanations appear quite inadequate. At the same time a literalist extraterrestrial hypothesis must account for the relative paucity of solid physical information — the lack of photographs of the beings, for example — and the virtually insurmountable problems related to accounting for the location, origins, and lives of the aliens themselves within the framework of the physical laws of our space/time universe. This last frustration has led some ufologists to posit a "multiverse" and the intrusion into our familiar reality of other dimensions or forces outside of the known physical universe. Others have turned to alternative notions of the nature of the cosmos, more familiar to Eastern religions and philosophy, that depict the universe and all its realities as a vast play of consciousness with physical manifestations.

My own work with abductees has impressed me with the powerful dimension of personal growth that accompanies the traumatic experiences that David Jacobs so accurately describes, especially when these people receive appropriate help in exploring their abduction histories. An intense concern for the planet's survival and a powerful ecological-logical consciousness seem to develop for many abductees. Whether this is a specific element, or even purpose, of the abduction enterprise or an inadvertent by-product of integrating a self-destroying traumatic narrative remains to be explored.

For me and other investigators, abduction research has had a shattering impact on our views of the nature of the cosmos. This has led me to offer at least a parable, if not a theory, to illuminate what is going on. Virtually all peoples throughout history, with the exception of the Western culture of the Newtonian/Cartesian era, have experienced the universe as possessing some sort of intelligence or consciousness in which human beings participate with other animate beings and inanimate things in an enterprise that has meaning, purpose, and direction, however unfathomable these may be. In the West, we seem, for some reasons perhaps as mysterious as the abduction phenomenon itself, to have cut ourselves off almost totally from awareness of any form of higher intelligence. But let us suppose that such an intelligence did exist, and what is more, that it was not indifferent to the fate of the Earth, regarding its life forms and transcendent beauty as one of its better or more advanced creations. And let us imagine that the imbalance created by the overgrowth of certain human faculties, a kind of technodestructive and fear-driven acquisitiveness, were "diagnosed" (perceived? fathomed? felt?)— we really do not know how the divinity might experience itself and its creation) as the basic problem. What could be done as a corrective?

The two natural approaches of which we can conceive would be the genetic and the environmental. Is it possible that through a vast hybridization program affecting countless numbers of people, and a simultaneous invasion of our consciousness with transforming images of our self-destruction, an effort is being made to place the planet under a kind of receivership? This would not necessarily be for "our" good if this planet, on which humankind has broken the harmony of being, does not exist just for our pleasure, but in order to arrest the destruction of life and to make possible the further evolution of consciousness or whatever the anima mundi has in store. I do not say that this is true or offer it as a theory. I would merely suggest that if we could allow ourselves to reintroduce the possibility of a higher intelligence into the universe, and experience the numinous mystery of creation, this scenario is consistent with the facts of the abduction phenomenon.

David Jacobs has written in this book, "No significant body of thought has come about that presents strong evidence that anything else is happening other than what the abductees have stated." He has made his case well and has greatly enriched our knowledge of what the abductees have to tell of their experiences. We must now go on from here.

"Case of the Century"

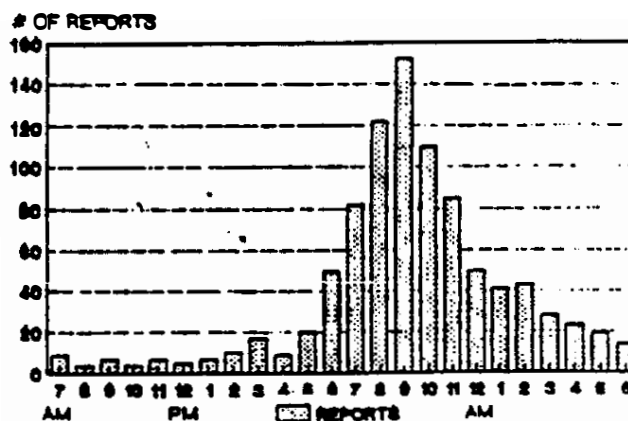

For those not aware, Budd Hopkins revealed an extremely important abduction experience at the 1992 MUFON Symposium in Albuquerque, NM on July 11th. He had been working on an alleged abduction case of a woman from her 12th story window in a downtown NYC apartment building at 3:30 a.m. one night last year. Under hypnosis she stated she had been taken by three small gray entities, floated out her window and up into a hovering craft. About three months into his work with her he received a letter from an alleged witness to the event. The witness was one of three men (one a prominent political figure, whose name is, of course, being protected, and the other two, his body guards) who witnessed the abduction from (get this) their "stalled" car just a block away (sound familiar?). They saw the hovering UFO just above the building. Helplessly, they watched the woman (dressed in a white gown) and three small humanoids "roll" out of the window in a fetal position, uncoil and rise into the bottom of the craft in a blue beam. There was even another confirmation from a woman who was at the time driving across the Brooklyn Bridge. You will be hearing more about this case, but I thought the event was outstanding, plus it seems to have been both a CE-4 (Abduction) AND a CE-2 (E-M Effects).

Peak sighting time... One of the things that have bothered me during the computer study was the peak sighting period of 9-10 p.m. I always assumed that there had to be a peak, that it probably had more to do with human action than ET, and that it probably did not represent the best time to set up a skywatch. But what is it about man's behavior that precipitates more sighting events between 9 and 10 p.m.? Does it have something to do with work shifts? The content of the reports should tell us something about that. And the "build-up and build-down" prior to and after that peak is interesting in itself. Well, get ready for a surprise! In 1991 the pattern shifted to 8-9 p.m., with secondary peaks at 11 p.m. and 3 a.m.! This was based on 151 reports filed, 31 being representative of the 8-9 p.m. group.

Alien Command Structure... On August 15, I had an interesting telephone conversation with Bruno Molon, our FI/SSD for Lake County, Indiana. His prime interest is in alien command structure, etc. He wants to know more about the occupants of the craft, in particular he wants to study abduction accounts to determine what size and shape different craft have for different applications. Mankind has many different types of craft, each designed for a specific purpose. Just why ET needs triangular craft after so many sighting years of "saucers" is a mystery! There has to be a reason.

Nocturnal Creatures... Also discussed with Bruno Molon was the nocturnal nature of sightings and my mentioning in a previous newsletter that UFO sightings are predominantly nighttime encounters and seem to be nocturnal worldwide. One of my "think tank" people suggested it follows that, if so, the events would follow the rotation of the earth into the night side of the earth. However, Molon feels that ET would have nearby bases on the moon or Mars, and/or they would have a remote spot on the earth or a nearby orbital space base, all just minutes away. I tend to agree that this is in line with what we would do, still retaining the idea (based on the evidence) that ET is probably is a nocturnal creature and works covertly in the earth's darkness, resting (if they rest at all) during our daylight. Possibly specific groups work in shifts and have their debriefings in daylight sectors while we are working (avoiding exposure during daylight hours.). Or, they may not need to rest and may simply change locations. Mr. Molon mentioned that the logistics of such an operation would be mind-boggling. "Servicing" one out of every 50 people (abductees) on some type of monumental schedule, mostly in the night hours, is simply staggering.

NSA Fact... In the mid-1970's, in reply to FOIA request for UFO information, the NSA was denying any interest in UFO's. After several unsuccessful attempts to obtain UFO-related documents from the NSA, a lawsuit was filed. The court upheld the NSA's denial of access, as subsequently did an appeals court. Although a petition was filed, the Supreme Court refused to hear the case. The 135 known NSA UFO-related documents, and very probably a much larger number of unknown documents remain secret. (Source: CAUS). Over 3,000 documents from other branches of the government have been released.

Sightings Update... On July 8, the UFO Filter Center received a letter from CUFO's Assistant to the Director, David A. Boras. They received a sighting report on July 6th from Indianapolis and wanted the Indiana Group/MUFON to follow up on it. The sighting occurred Sunday, July 5, 1992 between 7:30 and 8:00 p.m. The two witnesses (a man and his brother) were on the second story balcony of their apartment building, located about 3 miles southwest of the Indianapolis airport. They saw a circle of white light, with a flashing red light underneath, move towards the airport from the east. The object stopped and then appeared to hover near or above the airport for about ten minutes. As an aircraft approached the airport, the object moved upward and dimmed its lights. When the aircraft passed, the object moved back down and hovered for approximately another three minutes. After this, the object moved back toward the east. The total sighting lasted about fifteen minutes. CUFOS sent the witnesses a form and said they would forward any additional information about this case to us as they get it. Upon receipt of the letter, I immediately made a copy and forwarded it to SSD Norma Croda. In a letter dated July 31, I was advised that the man who reported the sighting near the Indianapolis International Airport cannot be located. He failed to reply to a letter sent to him and is not listed in the phone book. Croda then sent another letter with a Form 1 to complete. There has been no reply.

Well, it sure isn't Batman, Bunkie!

Something mighty peculiar interrupted journalist Glenn Emery's gardening one Sunday in mid-May. He looked up to see the biggest, loudest, strangest aircraft he'd ever seen! Local airport people and Dobbins Air Force Base officials said they didn't know what he was talking about, (you knew that would be their answer!) but dozens of other Stone Mountain, GA people saw it, too. Aviation Weekly Editor Bill Scott thinks it might be the first (ever) sighting of a mysterious aircraft with a distinctive, loud, pulsating noise that hundreds have reported hearing late at night in California and Nevada.

But Peachtree DeKalb Airport Director Ted Orvold says it's a Beechcraft Starship. "It'll definitely get your attention," he added. That's because the fiberglass airplanes look like they're flying backward! Both Emery and Bill Scott have ruled out this idea since, some time later, Emery had the chance to see the Beechcraft Starship and described it as being "about the size of the tail" of the mystery ship he'd witnessed. He's sure about one thing, though. "It's not a UFO." Darn.

Reports of this incident and the accompanying illustration were printed in the PEACH BUZZ, a local newspaper in Stone Mountain, Georgia and was sent to Bill McNeff by his brother and sister-in-law who are residents in the area. They've seen the Beechcraft Starship themselves and say that indeed, it is a very strange looking critter!

A Request

I am always happy to hear from MUFON members, whether it be by letter, telephone or in person. But I would like to request that you generally not phone me after 10:30 p.m. I am one of those people who needs about 7-1/2 hours of sleep every night. However, if you should find a black helicopter or a UFO hovering over your house in the middle of the night, go ahead and call me -- and I'll try to alert MUFON investigators who may be in your vicinity!

Did you know: Over 4000 crop circles have been reported from around the world -- and 3000 of them are in a small triangle in southern Britain which encompasses Stonehenge and a dozen or more prehistoric sites.

Addendum

Important notice about MUFON meeting on Saturday, September 12

Dick Moss is proposing to run the Linda Moulton Howe tape containing explicit photos of alledged sexual contact between aliens and humans.

Due to the nature of these pictures, we urge that children under 18 years of age not attend this meeting.

Dr. John R. Salter to speak

Mark your calendars for Monday, September 28, when Dr. John Salter will speak to the Archaeus Project, 2402 University Avenue.

Dr. Salter will speak in detail on his ET experiences, especially the 1988 encounter, and the many positive physiological changes he has had since that occasion. He will also discuss correlations between his CEIV experiences and increased social justice sensitivity action, and will present the view that the ETs are assisting the human race in moving toward cosmic maturity.

It is hoped that the exact time of Dr. Salter's appearance and directions to Archaeus will be available at our September 12 MUFON meeting. This is a "don't miss" – highly recommended by Bill McNeff.

Dick Moss recently conducted an investigation of the Fergus Falls/Underwood crop marking. He learned that a UFO was sighted in the vicinity of July 2 prior to the discovery of the crop marking. To add to the intrigue, there seems to be on-going activity in the immediate area and Dick plans further investigation. Interesting note: iron washers and nuts on a hand held string swing in circles in the formation, but no magnetic force is measurable.
